PRINCE BISMARCK.

A Stirring Appeal to the Patriotism of the Germans.

RELATIONS WITH OTHER POWERS

Russia May Do as she Likes with Bulgaria—France a Power not Feared but Always to be Guarded Against.

BERLIN, Jan 11—The reichstag was crowded to-day the occasion being the calling up of the government military bill in its amended form for the second reading. Herr Von Wedell Piesdorf president of the chamber read the committee's report of the bill. The committee said it was not authorized to advocate any of the proposals in connection with the measure because none of them had obtained the sanction of a majority of the committee.

Gen Von Moltke opened the debate in favor of the second reading on behalf of the government. He said he did not believe that any state should assume the responsibility of increasing the supply of combustible material which at present existed in a greater or less degree everywhere. Strong governments he contended, were the best guarantee of peace while danger lay in the ambitions of party leaders and their influence on public opinion. If any state, said Gen Von Moltke, can work effectively to preserve the peace it is Germany, who arms solely on the defensive. For this she must be strong and prepared for war. Should we against our will, he continued, be involved in war we shall be able to wage it. If this bill be rejected we shall most certainly have war. To day's vote in the reichstag on the measure will not fail to have its effect abroad. The army alone renders possible protection to all other political institutions, which must stand or fall with it. A grant for a short time will not be acceptable. The eyes of Europe are fixed on this body. I appeal to your patriotism to adopt the bill and show the world your readiness to make any sacrifice even of your own adverse opinion if the well being of the fatherland is at stake.

Baron Stauffenberg followed Gen Von Moltke and while he was speaking Bismarck entered the chamber.

At the conclusion of Baron Stauffenberg's speech Prince Bismarck rose. He said: The desire of all the military authorities of the empire is only opposed by Herr Richter, Herr Windthorst and Herr Grilledberger. It was difficult to conclude peace at Frankfort and it was still more difficult to maintain a degree of intimacy and mutual confidence that exists between Germany and Austria such as never before existed at any period of the German federation. We are bound to maintain peace for this quarter of the globe but for this a strong army is required. Our relations with all the powers are of the best, and our good relations with Russia are beyond all doubt. I should have considered entering upon war on account of Bulgaria as an act of treason against my country.

RUSSIA CAN HAVE HER WAY.

"What is Bulgaria to us," continued Prince Bismarck. "It is all the same to us whoever governs there. The friendship of Russia is surely more important to us than that of Bulgaria. We have not allowed ourselves to be induced by any one to make an enemy of Russia for the sake of Bulgaria. To maintain good relations among the powers is more difficult than you think. We cannot allow our efforts to be nullified by journalistic or parliamentary attacks.

"Our relations with France continue good. To maintain them is difficult because a long historical process must be accomplished before the feelings of the past are appeased and differences reconciled. We have done everything to induce the French to forget and forgive. We have no present grounds to apprehend war with France neither have we any reason to fear it, if it should happen. There can be no question about our attacking France, but we must protect ourselves against attacks. Under no ordinary circumstances shall we attack France but shall always be compelled to arm ourselves in such a manner as to be equal to the contingency of war."

This is the supreme object of the army bill. I have a firm confidence in the peaceful disposition of the French government and a portion of the French people. Still the past teaches us that we cannot count on peace with France as permanent. A government may one day come into power at Paris which will make war upon us. This you must take into account. If we do not prepare if you say to-day, when war comes we shall grant everything we should be laughed at. Is there in France a single paper or a single public person who says we renounce our rights to Alsace Lorraine. The possibility of French aggression is therefore a sufficient motive for the bill.

FRANCE'S STRENGTH.

France is a strong and well armed power. Her army is brave and ready to fight. We must never sit idle with our hands in our laps however peaceful France may look for the moment. Suppose the French were victorious what would we have to expect. We should have the same French against us from whom we suffered from 1780 to 1813, and should again suck our blood that we would be paralyzed for thirty years. Endeavors would be made to permanently weaken us. Such demands would be made as to give up Hanover. I am only describing the possibilities that might arise in the event of our defeat. The peace of 1870 is mere child's play in comparison with what peace would be after a war in 1890. He who wishes to take the responsibility for this let him.

The federal government will not take that responsibility and they therefore submit this bill. They wish to have permanently sufficiently trained soldiers in the empire. We have chosen the seven years' term because this was the period of the previous compromise, and our constitutional life depends upon that compromise. The federal council did all they could in consenting to the septennial period. They had only the interests and security of the empire and the well being of the fatherland in view. Do you believe that if you refuse to adopt the term proposed in the bill the federal council will deviate from their original proposal. If a similar demand were made in France do you think there is any possibility of its being refused. [Cheers.] No ground exists for placing difficulties in the way of the federal government in regard to the period of duration of the bill especially in view of the fact that we have kept strictly to the text and spirit of the constitution. Understand now that we resolutely adhere to our demand for the septennial.

THE THREAT OF DISSOLUTION.

We cannot give way even a hair's breadth. [Applause from the right.] Who can guarantee always the same majority in this house? Do you wish to make the rise and fall of the German army dependent on majorities in the reichstag? By so doing you change the imperial army into a parliamentary farce. In this case we might have to appeal to the electors to discover whether that is really the wish of the nation. We shall see whether the electors will permit ideas actively to exist according to which the strength of the army is to be determined by the reichstag without the consent of the federal council or emperor. You can hardly expect that the emperor in his 90th year will contribute to the destruction of the work to which he has devoted the last thirty years of his life, the creation of Germany and the army of the German empire. If you believe that possible if you awaken the slightest suspicion that these are your aims, and if you do not speedily satisfy the wishes of the federal government regarding the defensive powers of Germany by a complete acceptance of the bill then we prefer to deal with another reichstag. We will enter into no further negotiations with you. The danger in which we might place the German nation by procrastination forces us to promptly obtain a decisive answer or to address ourselves to others who will give us such an answer.

The question has been asked, why has the government not waited for the expiration of the existing septennial? The leading reason was that the government has been convinced that the system of frontier guarding requires immediate strengthening. We do not wish to endanger the empire by delaying the bill and we were not prepared for any opposition to so moderate a demand. Had we known it is beforehand we should have done better and first consulted the electors as to whether or not they wish to preserve the German empire and its present accessions. As it is now, we must insist on our demands.

At the conclusion of the speech Prince Bismarck was loudly cheered.

RUSSIA NOT TO BE OFFENDED.

Prince Bismarck became impassionate when referring to France and was apparently indifferent as to what impression his words were likely to make. There was a marked difference in his references to Russia. Every word he uttered showed his anxiety not to offend the latter or to make her suspicious. During his speech Prince Bismarck drank nine glasses of cold brandy and water. While the debate was going on the galleries in the reichstag were crammed and the streets adjacent to the house were thronged with people.

PRESS COMMENT.

SEVERAL DIFFERENT OPINIONS.

LONDON, Jan 11—The Daily News referring to Bismarck's speech in the reichstag says it will have a bad effect upon the peace of Europe and that it tends to confirm the fears that Germany meditates an attack upon France.

The Telegraph thinks the speech will chill to the freezing point the martial ardor of the Revanche party in France and that the utterances of both Von Moltke and the chancellor will have a good effect in preserving the peace.

The Standard says: The speeches of Bismarck and Von Moltke make the situation look less possible of war than ever. Von Moltke's assurance that Germany's desire for peace is doubtless sincere. Bismarck's possibly is so, but the stringent measures they insist upon to maintain peace only shows how precarious is its continuance.

The Times, remarking the probability that Bismarck will be defeated, says: His statement is discouraging both to those who looked to Germany as a minister of peace [illegible] rights and to those who hoped to see Europe gradually relieved of the grievous burden of enormous armies and increasing taxation. He sees a threatened storm and is determined to provide for the safety of his own country.

THE FEELING IN FRANCE.

ALWAYS PREPARED FOR EMERGENCIES.

PARIS, Jan 11—M Floquet was to-day re-elected president of the chamber of deputies. In the senate Carnot presided. He said that there were two conditions essential to the prosperity of France—stability within the nation and peace abroad. To exhibit France as impatient for war was merely an artifice used to remove her from certain parliaments. The national spirit of the French people had no need to be revived by the fear of any foreign power. No military party exists in France for the army was essentially civic. The body of the country desired peace, but should events occur contrary to its wishes would prove it had not lost time during the past fifteen years.

MORE MONEY FOR THE MILITARY.

PARIS, Jan 11—The government has decided to increase this year's extraordinary military credit from 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 francs. It is stated that the government asks this increase to enable it to commence the manufacture of rifles and increase its defenses. Rumors are current that M Boulanger will resign the war portfolio because Premier Goblet refuses to countenance heavy military credits.

ENGLAND.

DRIVEN BACK BY STORMS.

LONDON, Jan 11—The State line steamer State of Alabama Capt Cambell which left Glasgow December 1 for New York and which was reported sitting back disabled has arrived at Queenstown. She experienced terrific weather when 800 miles westward of Queenstown and lost three blades of her propeller.

The water appliances were very meager and the firemen were obliged to allow the fire to take its course and to direct their efforts to prevent the flames from spreading to the town. During the progress of the fire three officers and seventeen men were injured, some of them seriously. No one was killed. The palace was recently restored at a cost of one million dollars.

TONQUIN.

FRENCH TROOPS REPULSED.

PARIS, Jan 11—Official despatches from Tonquin report that French troops made an attack on a large rebel force entrenched at Tha hoa but were twice repulsed. Reinforcements of artillery and infantry will be sent to the French at Tha hoa.

A SWINDLE WITHIN A SWINDLE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 11—The fact has just been learned that bogus Louisiana lottery tickets have been manufactured in this city for over a year. The discovery was made through the presentation of one of these tickets the number of which had drawn a prize. The lottery company declared it a forgery and an investigation followed the result of which is made known to day. The tickets are made at the lithographic place of G D Baker of this city. The place was searched by detectives who seized a number of lithographing stones and dies from which the impressions of the bogus tickets were taken, and also a large amount of tickets for October, November and December. The names of the men who ordered the lithographing and made use of the tickets have been ascertained by the police but not made public and warrants have been issued for their arrest.

AN INDEPENDENT BUS LINE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 11—The striking carmen have adopted a new plan to bring about a successful end to their strike. This plan which is as follows will go into operation to-morrow morning. The men have leased five wagons and twenty horses and procured a large stable. The wagons will make regular trips from the ferry to the Central avenue terminus of the Sutter street railroad for the accommodation of people who withhold their patronage from the roads. Before the end of the week the men expect to have several large busses on the road. No fare will be charged on the line, but in each wagon a box will be placed to receive contributions from passengers who can afford and are disposed to contribute a small sum to assist the men in their struggle.

DISEASE GERMS IN MILK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 11—Dr F A Hopkins microscopic specialist of this city has been recently investigating the charges against the quality, cleanliness and healthfulness of the milk supplied by the city dairies. He examined milk from a number of dairies and has come to the conclusion that two-thirds of the dairies furnish milk containing germs of consumption. He says that many diseases as diphtheria, typhoid and scarlet fevers, measles, erysipelas and consumption are liable to be developed by these germs transmitted from the milk to the blood of those who consume the fluid.

Senator Dolph's Urgent Appeal for an Open Waterway.

A STEAMBOAT RAILWAY NEEDED

The East Portland Postmastership—Northern Pacific Forfeiture—The House Discusses the Subject of Pleuro Pneumonia

WASHINGTON, Jan 11—Dolph to day secured the floor and submitted lengthy and forcible remarks on his resolution looking to the establishment of a boat railway at The Dalles. After referring to the size of the Columbia, the commerce thereon, the area drained thereby, the population along its tributaries and the great need of an unobstructed river, he spoke of the works necessary to remove such obstructions. He said the improvement at The Dalles should have been commenced at the same time as that at the Cascades. He regarded a boat railway based on the reports of the engineer as not only entirely practicable. Never before in the history of the government has there been a more auspicious time for beginning such an experiment, if this can be denominated an experiment. The country is at peace, is prosperous and the treasury is overflowing with a hoarded surplus. He had no apology to make for the earnestness and persistency with which he has ever pressed upon the attention of the senate and the commerce committee the importance of improving the rivers and harbors of the Northwest. He characterized the question of an unobstructed river as the all-absorbing one with the people living in the country tributary to the Columbia. They are interested in coast defenses and not indifferent to the subject of tariff and finance, but the one transcending all other, even that of party politics, is the subject of an unobstructed river. In this is involved the question of cheap transportation which when secured means assured and permanent prosperity.

Action on the resolution by the senate was not pressed as the Oregon senators have concluded to seek to secure an appropriation for the boat railway in the river and harbor bill subject to the approval of plans by the secretary of war.

THE EAST PORTLAND POSTMASTER.

Two weeks ago it seemed that some applicant other than W B Welch would be appointed postmaster at East Portland. Since then however such representations have been made to the postmaster general as to cause him to appoint Mr Welch rather than the one he then had in view. During the past few days the wires have been kept warm by petitions and remonstrances against certain applicants. Especially strong have been the requests that no lady be given the office. A very prominent Portland democrat protested against the appointment of C B Carlisle on the ground that he is a republican and voted for Blaine.

NORTHERN PACIFIC FORFEITURE.

Answering an inquiry as to prospects of legislation on the Northern Pacific forfeiture bills, Dolph states that time and again he has urged the house conference committee to submit to the house the disagreements of the senate and house committees in order that he may submit his report to the senate. So far the house committee has refrained from acting.

FREE MAIL DELIVERY AT SEATTLE.

With reference to the establishment of a free delivery system at Seattle as provided in the new law the first assistant postmaster general tells me it is possible that the service cannot be extended to this and other cities until the first of next July as there is now no appropriation for the extension. He to day transmitted estimates to congress for the new service asking for an appropriation to carry the law into immediate effect. I C J

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Jan 11—Wills of Kentucky reported back the river and harbor appropriation bill and it was referred to the committee of the whole.

In the morning hour the house resumed in committee of the whole, consideration of the bill for the erection of a public building at Charleston S C. The bill appropriates $10,000 for the purchase of a site and $400,000 for the erection of a building.

Hepburn of Iowa, moved to reduce this latter amount to $200,000. The city, he asserted, was in its decadence and in support of this assertion he stated that between 1860 and 1880 the whole population has increased only 1,000 while between the same period government receipts from all sources had already fallen off.

Dibble of South Carolina thought Hepburn's statement was not a fair one. In the period between 1860 and 1880 Charleston had passed through the misfortunes of four years of war and at the close of the war grass had been growing in her streets. As he did not wish to imperil the bill he asked the committee to agree to Hepburn's motion.

This was done. The committee rose and the bill as amended was passed.

The next committee on the list was the committee on Pacific railroads but the morning hour expired before action was taken.

AN IMPORTANT BILL PASSED.

The house then passed the bill for establishment of a bureau of agriculture and labor. It provides that there shall be at the seat of government an executive department to be known as the department of agriculture and labor, under control of a secretary of agriculture and labor and an assistant secretary. There shall be in the department of agriculture and labor a division which shall be under the charge of a commissioner of labor, who shall hold his office four years and whose successor shall be appointed unless sooner removed and who shall receive $5000 per year. This commissioner shall collect information upon the subject of labor its relation to capital, hours of labor, rates of wages, cost of production of articles produced, earnings of laboring men and women, means of providing for their material, social, intellectual and moral prosperity and the best means to protect life and prevent accidents in mines, workshops, factories and other places of industry.

The secretary is empowered to inquire into causes of discontent which may exist between employers and employes within the United States and he may invite and hear sworn statements from both such parties concerning the matters in controversy.

OTHER BUSINESS.

Herbert of Alabama then called up the naval reorganization bill. He was antagonized by Hatch with a motion that the house go into committee of the whole for the purpose of considering the bill amendatory of the act establishing a bureau of animal industry. The recent outcrop of cattle disease in Chicago, Hatch said, made it an imperative necessity that the house should pass this bill as every hour of delay was dangerous.

Swinburn of New York hoped the bill would not be considered as it has never been considered by the commissioner on agriculture.

Hatch declared the statement was misleading. The bill had been considered in committee and a favorable report was ordered.

Hatch's motion was agreed to and the house accordingly went into committee of the whole on the bill named.

PLEURO PNEUMONIA.

Hatch said the present law was beneficial so far as it went but that it did not go far enough. It was inefficient and inadequate to suppress the spread of pleuro pneumonia which if not controlled by national legislation would in a short time utterly destroy the value of the cattle industry. The danger could not be overestimated. The loss in dollars and cents to the people of the United States when the first gun was fired at Sumpter which ushered in rebellion was not greater than that threatened by the outbreak of pleuro pneumonia.

Proceeding to the consideration of the details of the bill he said that the danger consisted chiefly in the removal of the restriction upon the commissioner of agriculture as to the employment of force to enforce the law and empowering the commissioner with the co-operation of the state authorities under state laws to condemn and destroy infected cattle. That right did not exist under the present law, the commissioner being able to get possession of infected cattle only by purchase from the owner and some states had prohibited the commissioner to enter for the purpose of enforcing the law. It was provided in the pending bill that where the states refused or neglected to co-operate with the commissioner the president should declare that state in quarantine and prohibit transportation of cattle out of it.

McMillan of Tennessee inquired whether a cow affected with pleuro pneumonia was not worth [illegible]. Hatch replied that it was worse than useless.

McMillan further inquired why if a cow was worth than useless the treasury should be called to pay the value of the animal before it contracted the disease.

Hatch replied that this provision was based upon the experience of the most enlightened governments [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. It was easy to conceal the existence of the disease [illegible] [illegible] that some compensation must be given to owners of infected cattle, if the money which could be appropriated could not stamp out the disease.

PAYING FOR DISEASED ANIMALS.

McMillan—Then you propose to pay any man who owns a herd of cattle afflicted with the disease to bring it here and sell it?

Hatch—The object is to induce any man who owns a herd of cattle affected with pleuro pneumonia to give immediate notice to the department in order that it may be condemned and be destroyed.

Morgan of Mississippi opposed the bill on the ground that it was vain and illusive, and would amount to nothing. It did not reach the evil which it was intended to do, and was a mere myth. He agreed with the gentleman from New York, Swineburn, who had submitted the minority report, that the disease should be treated in the same manner as a disease among human beings and that there was no more reason for the destruction of diseased cattle than there was for the destruction of human beings when afflicted with smallpox or yellow fever.

Butterworth of Ohio asked whether pleuro-pneumonia was a contagious disease.

Morgan replied that it was a communicable disease.

Butterworth suggested that if it could be communicated it did not matter much how it was termed.

Morgan said that some diseases were contagious and communicable and some infectious but that the bill took in the whole. He further criticised the bill in that it authorized the president on recommendation of the commissioner of agriculture to place a state in quarantine, which would virtually put it in the power of the commissioner to suspend the commerce of any state. Swineburn of New York the member of the committee who presented the minority report, had that report read as a part of his remarks.

OPPOSITION TO THE APPROPRIATION.

In that report he says: "Both the original bill and the substitute offered by the chairman of the committee on agriculture re-enact the powers of the commissioner of agriculture and extend them so that wherever in the opinion of the commissioner it is deemed advisable he may quarantine and slaughter the diseased cattle and compensate the owners, by the original bill at four fifths of their value, and by the substitute of the chairman of the committee on agriculture at three fourths of their value. The whole argument of the chief of the bureau of animal industry is an effort to convince the nation, and particularly congress, to whom he appeals for a large appropriation, that there is but one remedy and that is total extirpation of the diseased cattle by slaughter. If such a system is to be adopted he would recommend changing the name of the department from the bureau of animal industry to the bureau of butchery for the destruction of domestic animals of the United States, to be in charge of a corps of butcher boys who would be as well qualified for the position as the present head of the bureau seems to be competent for his. In his recommendation the chief recommends the very absurd proposition that a liberal indemnity should be paid the owners of cattle to report cases of sickness, where small indemnity leads to the secretion of the disease. This is a new feature in public ethics which requires a premium to be paid men to prevent violations of law. Aside from the legal question arising as a matter of equity it would be equally logically for the government to appropriate funds to pay farmers for the loss of their stock and crops by cyclones or any other unforeseen cause because such crops were the dependence of his family.

We are firm in the conviction that this disease termed pleuro-pneumonia is blood poison originating among cattle in the stables and stock yards and we agree with the opinion of ex Commissioner of Agriculture Loring that it can be checked by quarantine in open well protected fields and that until stringent laws are enforced to protect cattle in the stables and stock yards and in transportation and for providing them with proper food and water the disease cannot be extirpated and the public protected from the diseased meats and poisonous milk of infected cows. We are of opinion that the disease is not increasing but rather diminishing, as in New York and Brooklyn where stringent sanitary laws are enforced. Believing that the theory of inoculation has failed to produce the desired results and that slaughtering as a means to extirpate is cowardly and unwise, we are opposed to the appropriation asked by the chief of the bureau of animal industry to be expended as he recommends in his report."

Pending further debate the committee rose and the house adjourned.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan 11—Dawes from the committee on Indian agencies reported back with amendments the house bill granting the St. Paul Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad company a right of way through the Indian reservations in northern Montana and northwestern Dakota. Calendar.

Cameron, from the committee on military affairs reported a bill for the relief of telegraph operators during the war. Calendar.

On motion of Mr Manderson the house bill for the relief of settlers and purchasers of land in the public domain in Nebraska and Kansas was taken up and considered, the question being on the substitute reported by the committee on public lands. The substitute appropriates $35,000 to reimburse purchasers, homesteaders and pre-emptors who had to pay for the lands to the Northern Kansas Railway company which was decided by the circuit court of the United States to have priority of title to the lands, the basis of reimbursement being $3 50 per acre. After discussion the substitute was referred and the bill as thus amended was passed and a conference was asked.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE DALLES.

Senate then took up the resolution offered by Dolph directing the secretary of war to examine and report as to the necessity for improvement of that portion of the Columbia river known as the Dalles by removal of obstructions and as to the practicability and probable cost of overcoming such obstruction by the construction of a steam boat railway. After a speech by Dolph in explanation and advocacy of the resolution and a statement by Mitchell of Oregon, in the same line, the resolution went over without action.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The senate then at 2 o'clock resumed consideration of the interstate commerce bill and was addressed by Coke in favor of the conference report.

After a long discussion by Harris, McPherson, Camden and Aldrich, on the inter state commerce bill, Cullom repeated the notice heretofore given by him that he would ask the senate to remain in session to-morrow until the bill was disposed of after the executive session adjourned.

SECRET SESSION.

The senate in secret session passed a resolution advising the president to enter into negotiations with Nicaragua for concessions for an interoceanic canal. The resolution came from the committee on foreign relations. It was debated two hours and was vigorously opposed by a majority of the senate. A motion was made to take up the British extradition treaty, but pending action the senate adjourned.

Edmunds from the committee on judiciary reported favorably on the amendment to the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill making an appropriation of $1000 to enable the commissioner of labor to collect and report to congress statistics relative to marriage and divorce within the United States.

NOMINATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Jan 11—The president sent the following nominations to the senate to-day: Postmasters—At Hollister, Cal, Haydon Dawds; Monterey, Cal, Edward Ingram; East Portland, Or, Wm B Welch; Ogden City, Utah, John G Tyler.

How it Got in its Work in the November Elections in Texas.

WASHINGTON, Jan 11—The petition of Stephen A Hackworth, real estate dealer, James L Moore, a merchant, and Carl Schitz, ex-district attorney of Washington county, Tex, and editor of the Brenham Staats Zeitung, presented to-day by Senator Hawley, sets forth that they were law abiding citizens of Brenham, Washington county, Tex, who dared to believe and maintain the right to be republicans in politics. For this, "their only crime," it continues, "your petitioners are now exiles from their homes, having been compelled to leave under serious threats of assassination and to abandon their property or to accept for it such prices as were proffered them." The petition states that at the election held on the 2d of last November a perfect reign of terror existed in Washington county, caused by armed bands of white ruffians, who, by violence and by destruction of the ballot-boxes at Gribalia, Flewellen and Lott's store election precincts, prevented a free and fair expression of suffrage by the citizens of the county, whereby men in whose interest those crimes were committed were declared elected, who were not in fact elected, and by the most shameless and unblushing frauds the election was made a farce."

"Every effort," the petition continues, "to obtain redress for wrongs and security for life and property has been prevented by the wanton and cruel murder of important witnesses, and by the further fact that a body of state troops, ostensibly ordered to the county to preserve the law, work in fact in close concert with the lawless men who had committed the election outrages." The petition further avers that the republicans are in a majority in Washington county, but that in order to prevent the republicans from securing their political rights and privileges in the county, Alfred Jones, Shadrach Felder and Stewart Jones, three colored republicans, were arrested upon pretended and malicious charges of crime and while in the custody of the civil authorities were surrendered to a Kuklux and hanged for the reason that the civil authorities of said county together with their confiding political friends, well knowing that satisfactory and adequate evidence would be obtained at such trial which would expose and make public their political crimes, ordered and instigated the death of said Alfred Jones, Shadrach Felder and Stewart Jones.

The petitioners further allege that John Ireland, governor of Texas, "has failed and refused to make any effort whatever to have arrested and brought to trial the lawless men who committed this outrage, although the facts were made known to him and he was earnestly requested to take prompt action thereon." After a further recital in more detail of the charges stated the petition concludes: "And your petitioners hereby respectfully [illegible] the matters herein stated [illegible] your honorable body for your careful consideration and such action as you may deem necessary to secure the rights herein stated and thereby secure for all citizens of the United States their rights under a republican form of government in fact as well as in name."

THE LEGISLATURE.

Determined Battle Waged against Machine Rule.

NO RESULTS AS YET REACHED.

A Large Number of Bills Introduced in Both Houses and as Many More Still Unread—Bills Local to Portland

SALEM, Jan. 11.—The chief interest of the day has been with reference to the appointment of the standing committees of the senate. The matter was supposed to have been disposed of yesterday by the laying of Dawson's motion on the table but it came up again this morning when Siglin, a democrat who always acts with the Portland ring managers, introduced a resolution authorizing the president to appoint the standing committees. Hare took the floor and a long debate fully set forth in the detailed report of the senate proceedings followed. Weatherford finally suggested that a committee of five composed of President Carson rep, Hare rep, Cartwright rep, Colman, dem, and Wager dem, be appointed to make up the standing committees. After further talk (all set forth in the detailed report) Weatherford agreed to an amendment increasing the committee to seven by the addition of Lee, rep, and Siglin, dem. Lee asked to be excused and Looney (rep) was substituted in his place. No action was taken and the matter was made a special order for 3 P M. At that hour the matter was again postponed till to-morrow. In the mean time there was a consultation or caucus when the opponents of the machine showed not only a formidable strength but a determined purpose. Barin as a compromise, proposed that President Carson should make up the standing committees with the assistance and advice of two democrats and two republicans, members of his own selection. This seemed satisfactory and while it was not positively adopted, it was understood that this would be the outcome. Later Simon and Seel concluded that they could do better, hence the postponement till to-morrow. There was another consultation or caucus to-night, lasting from half past 7 till 10 o'clock. The discussion covered a wide range and for a long time there seemed little hope of an amicable settlement, but finally Emmet proposed that Carson make up the committees and submit them to a full caucus of the republican members. After some discussion this proposition carried. The amended resolution calling for a special committee of seven to make up the standing committees will be tabled to-morrow in conformity with this understanding. It is understood that the main bone of contention is the organization of the railroad committee.

A HEAVY GRIST OF BILLS.

The senate's whole morning session was taken up with the controversy referred to above but a good afternoon's work was done as the detailed report will show. The bills read by no means clear the files, the clerk having as many more still unread in his possession. In the house too a good deal of work was done in the way of reading bills. There too the files were not cleared. In both houses about eighty bills were filed to-day and there will no doubt be as many more to-morrow. Many of the bills presented in the senate and house are identical, it being a custom of members to offer them simultaneously in both houses in the hope of getting them along faster.

A good deal of important legislation is suggested by the bills introduced to-day. Among bills of general interest Mitchell's bill for the reapportionment of the state is possibly of the most importance. It is not likely to become a law. Those who have an interest in opposing it will find good ground for objection in that it proposes as a basis not a state or national census as expressly provided by the constitution but an estimated enumeration based upon the returns of the last election.

Two bills were introduced to increase the salaries of supreme judges, one to $3000 and the other to $3600. It is understood that the supreme judges themselves have considered at least one of these bills and consider it within the authority of the constitution.

Two bills were also introduced in the house requiring foreign corporations doing business in the state to pay a special tax of $750 per annum. This is a direct thrust at the insurance companies, most of them being foreign in the sense contemplated by this bill. The proposition of Noyer's house bill—No. 7—to amend the road law is a measure of real importance.

THE IMMIGRATION BOARD.

Daly of Polk presented in the house a bill to abolish the state immigration office but there is small prospect that it will pass. The general sentiment seems to be that the office should be continued, but that its administration should be changed.

Daly's bill to make the Christian college at Monmouth a state normal school will be urged by the Polk county delegation and by whatever influence the school enthusiasts can bring to it but it is not likely to pass.

There are several bills among those already read local to Portland. One introduced by Goodsell increasing the pay of the Multnomah county assessor from $2750 to $3500 per annum was introduced by the advice of the county commissioners.

Another bill by Goodsell is to incorporate Albina as a city.

Another by Goodsell authorizing county courts to build armories in cities of 10,000 inhabitants is specially designed to help "the boys" out at Portland.

Bills authorizing the O. R. & N. company to build a bridge at Portland were introduced in both houses.

A bill authorizing the Portland Water commissioners to issue an additional series of bonds to the amount of $500,000 is among those filed but not yet read. Col Fleischner is here to explain the plans and views of the water commission. He had a conference to-day with the Multnomah house delegation and found that all excepting Summers and Harrington favored the Bull Run scheme. These gentlemen are not positively opposed to it, but wish to look into it more thoroughly before taking positive ground.

To-morrow at 10 30 Gov Moody will formally retire from the governorship. His last official act will be to read his retiring message to the legislature. Governor-elect Pennoyer after taking the oath of office will then read his message. The ceremonies will take place in the new hall of the house before the joint session of the senate and house of representatives.

Gov Pennoyer and wife will dine to-morrow with Gov and Mrs Moody and from 8 o'clock until 11 an informal reception will be held in their honor at Gov Moody's house. There are no invitations. The occasion will be a public one and all those who wish to do so may attend. A H

SENATE.

Morning session met at 10 20. Prayer by Rev. Webb of Salem.

Fred W Piper and G B Milroy were appointed pages.

Siglin of Coos offered a resolution that the president of the senate appoint the standing committees.

Hare of Washington objected to the adoption of the resolution. He said it was going back to an old time when there was more partisan feeling than to-day. The minority ought to be recognized. He favored a committee consisting of two of the minority, three of the majority and the president. He thought the day the majority should rule whether of either party had passed away. The majority should not assign the minority to committees. A selection of senators from various sections, who know one another to act on committees was the proper way. Divide the majority and appoint standing committees composed of representative members who would be an honor to the state. The United States senate had never passed any such a resolution, but had always given the minority a chance. He hoped the matter would be delayed and the members of both parties meet and consult over the matter. The rights of the minority ought to be respected. It would be a more dignified rule too.

INNOCENT SIGLIN.

Siglin said he didn't know when he introduced the resolution that he was doing anything very wicked. He was a member of the minority and he was very glad the senator from Washington took such interest in their rights. He was in the senate when the president appointed all the officers. He remembered when the authority was taken away from the president. There was a conflict in the republican ranks and the democrats stood in. But what good did it do them but to create ill feeling. Two years ago President McConnell fought his predecessor and his power was taken away from him as a rebuff. Afterwards a resolution of confidence in the president was passed to conciliate him. That was the history of it. It had always been the uniform practice. Those who were in the senate four years ago know that the republicans had a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] time and the taking away of

LOGAN AND HENDRICKS

The memorial sermon pronounced over Logan last Sunday evening here contained the following sentence

No country had ever a richer legacy in the lives of its great men recently deceased than have we Grant, Hancock, McClellan, Hendricks, and now Logan Pure men who, having set an example worthy of all praise and all imitation, have gone to their rest, monumented in the love of their countrymen.

The preacher evidently had forgotten, or had never known, the record of Hendricks during the great American conflict and subsequent to the war, or he would never have associated the names of Logan and Hendricks. If Logan was right Hendricks was eternally wrong, and vice versa, for they were not both right. Hendricks belonged during the war to the class of corroded and corrosive copperheads who called Lincoln "tyrant" and "baboon" who voted for Vallandigham in 1863, who called Fort Lafayette "Lincoln's bastile," who denounced the war as a failure as late as the day when Sherman had beaten in the gates of Atlanta with his battle-ax, who denounced the emancipation of the slaves as "Lincoln's last raid on constitutional government." Hendricks stood for the men who, after the war, opposed the great war amendments as "unconstitutional usurpations," and who have always striven to make them null and void by violence and fraud Hendricks rubbed his hands when the flag wavered in war he was in full sympathy with those who tried to make Andersonville defy and defer the evil day of Appomattox. Every relentless Confederate, like Early or Toombs, every unconverted copperhead between the two oceans, wrote Hendricks's name high on his list of political saints, while every ardent Unionist hangs his picture in the "rogue's gallery" of the rebellion. Surely such a man cannot be associated in historical honor with Logan, since the very things for which Logan was conspicuous in doing are among the things which Hendricks derided and struggled to defeat. Of the extent of the celebrated "northwestern conspiracy" against the government that was fomented and organized by the copperhead faction, to which Hendricks belonged, the Southern Bivouac has recently published some valuable information. Jacob Thompson's papers expose the negotiations of that Confederate agent of incendiarism and piracy with Vallandigham for the support of the secret society of the "Sons of Liberty," of which the latter was the grand commander. The object of this order was the cessation of the war and the withdrawal of the Federal armies from Southern territory, and in execution of their scheme they discouraged enlistments fomented resistance to the draft, and hoped to establish a northwestern confederacy. There were about 300,000 Sons of Liberty, partially armed, and Vallandigham expected on his return to Ohio from his banishment within the lines of the Southern Confederacy, to be immediately rearrested, which he thought "would lead to a general uprising and retaliation by the Sons of Liberty for the many acts of oppression which its members had suffered." Thompson, through the adjutant-general of the order, subsequently arranged for the distribution of funds to arm and mobilize the county organizations, and it is clear that at one time the Union cause was in imminent danger from these armed "Sons of Liberty waiting an opportunity to start a backfire in the loyal states Their courage was not equal to their opportunity, but of the treasonous purpose of this armed organization there is not the slightest doubt. The scheme for the liberation of the Confederate prisoners at Camp Douglas, Chicago was part of their work, and to the existence of this conspiracy Hendricks, Joe McDonald, and Voorhees, of Indiana, were all privy Logan, in his "History of the Great Conspiracy," describes Hendricks as the most artful and able leader of the copperhead obstructionists to Lincoln's administration during the war, and as the leader of the Bourbon opposition to the great amendments abolishing slavery, and the whole work of reconstruction after the war So notorious was Hendricks as a copperhead that when he visited Camp Morton he was hooted out of camp by the soldiers and would have been mobbed if Gov Morton had not persuaded the troops to refrain from all violence The Indiana volunteers of 1861 65 probably knew when they hooted Hendricks out of camp that he was not, like Morton, a man busy holding up Lincoln's hands in the battle for the flag

THE BELFAST RIOTS

From early June until August last Belfast the second city of Ireland, was disgraced by terrible riots At their conclusion a commission of investigation was ordered, consisting of Mr Justice Day, of the English bench, Maj Gen Sir E G Bulwer Mr F Le Poer Trench, Mr Richard Adams, and Mr Wallace McHardy, of Lanarkshire Justice Day represented the law, Gen. Bulwer the army and constabulary, Mr Trench the conservative party in Ireland, Mr Adams the popular party, and Mr McHardy the management of police according to British and in contradistinction to Irish ideas The town council was represented by counsel and solicitors, so were the Catholic committee and the loyalist defense committee and the Earl of Enniskillen and the Orange institution and the ratepayers and the constabulary The evidence taken showed that the Protestant mob had no excuse for disorder The Protestants have the government of the city in their entire hands and the institutions of the country [illegible] The [illegible] and wanton motive of these murderous riots was to impress the British public with a dread of what Belfast would do if home rule were granted The riots were commenced by a body of Protestants marching down with sticks and stones upon some Catholic workmen driving them into [illegible] throwing stones at them in the water and drowning [illegible]

Of [illegible]000 men employed in the shipbuilding yards [illegible] were Catholics, and of these [illegible] left, from fear of their Protestant fellow workmen It was in evidence that [illegible] of the magistrates [illegible] that [illegible] clergyman [illegible] were established in a certain loyal [illegible] he would arm [illegible]0 Orangemen and [illegible] out The rioting, once commenced, proceeded to a frightful extreme Catholic houses were wrecked one merchant alone lost $[illegible]000 by the destruction of his property The local magistrates were unable to stop the riots, and weakly removed the police from certain districts to conciliate the mob, and thus encouraged further and more outrageous violence. In the end the riots were not suppressed, but gradually wore themselves out. From the letter of the New York Evening Post's correspondent we condense the following summary of further facts elicited by this official investigation

Since the riots an Irish Protestant advocate of temperance arbitration and the brotherhood of man spoke glowingly on the way in which "even the corner boys of Belfast stuck up to their work" in assaulting a police barrack Things became worse and worse The ordinary police force of the city (select members of the royal Irish constabulary detailed for duty in Belfast by the inspector general in Dublin) proved insufficient and detachments of men from the country districts were drafted in besides large bodies of military The soldiers managed to maintain their popularity, but the fresh constabulars were from the first declared by the Protestants to be Catholics sent by "Morley to murder them The evidence revealed an extraordinary state of feeling between Catholic and Protestant in that city—almost absurd touchiness regarding the processions and emblems of the opposite party, separate doors arranged for Catholic and Protestant workers in some of the factories, the genuine belief of educated and respectable citizens that Mr Morley desired that they be shot down by the constabulary the manner in which "the whole respectable people of certain Protestant quarters sided with the mob against the police. Mr Reid inspector-general of constabulary in Ireland, expressed in evidence his conviction that "there was a regular set made by the Protestant party to drive the police bag and baggage out of Belfast."

The whole story sounds like a Southern election riot, where a "race conflict" means twenty-five dead "niggers" and a single white man with a broken head or a black eye. History has only repeated itself, and furnished further evidence that the most bitter, brutal, murderous and cruel bigot in all Ireland is an Irish Protestant, who is an "Orangeman." The wretched minority of Irish Catholics in Belfast were beaten, drowned, murdered, and their houses sacked, by the "Orange" mob in the spirit of cowardly outrage with which Southern mobs have murdered negroes and driven them into the swamps for refuge, or as mobs on this coast have beaten, murdered and hunted down helpless Chinamen The coward, the ferocious fool is the same creature in Belfast, Ireland, as he is in Copiah county, Miss., or at Rock Springs, Wyoming.

"Seasons may roll, but the brute soul burns the same wherever it goes."

THE PARDON BUSINESS

Gov Stoneman of California has grossly abused his prerogative of pardon by letting loose upon his community a large number of the worst convicts in the state penitentiary But Stoneman is not the only gross offender Gov Foraker of Ohio pardoned Mrs. Victor who was convicted in 1867 of poisoning her brother to get his life insurance. Gov Hayes commuted her sentence to life imprisonment. The governors of Oregon during recent years have not been conservative in the matter of pardons, nor have presidents of the United States. Recently President Cleveland pardoned Obey E Owens, paying teller of a bank in St. Louis who stole $200,000 in 1882, and has been confined in an Illinois penitentiary Owens was a widower with four children, a man of good connections and high respectability, facts that have no business for a moment to weigh with an executive in considering an application for pardon. Yet President Cleveland only imitated the weakness of President Hayes who pardoned a most notorious New England swindler, convicted of gross frauds on the pension department, on the plea that the convict was sick and not likely to survive long if kept in confinement An executive has no more business to take into consideration, in the matter of a prayer for pardon and its abrogation of just punishment the sickness or forlorn situation of the convict, than he has to decline to issue a warrant to execute capital punishment upon a man who, before his appointed hour of execution has succeeded in painfully wounding his throat

One of the commonest crimes for which executive clemency is successfully invoked is for what ought to be an unpardonable offense, that of forgery Forgery is well described as "the fashionable crime of intelligent and educated men of previous good reputation " It cannot be committed except by persons of considerable education it is an act of cool deliberation—not the result of accident or passionate impulse. It takes time, pains and practice for any man to imitate with his pen the signature of another for the purpose of fraud, and it is therefore a crime for which no extenuating circumstances can be fairly urged The plea for such dangerous and inexcusable criminals generally is the suffering of innocent wife and children. The answer to this is that personal, domestic and social interests of the individual must be sternly sacrificed to the higher interests of the state. This individual hardship must be endured if crime is to be punished at all The state ought not to enforce two different rules of justice, it ought not to grant clemency to respectable and fairly educated criminals, who fully realized the nature of their crimes when they deliberately committed them, and then turn a deaf ear to the ceaseless cry for release that comes from the cells of the poor, the friendless, and the ignorant, many of whom committed crimes for which they suffer because they lacked the full light of moral training and example in their miserable and illiterate youth

And yet presidents pardon counterfeiters and forgers, and governors pardon forgers and embezzlers The men who are guilty of what ought to be the most unpardonable offenses, are the men of education and large intelligence, members of leading churches, who lacked nothing of the light of ornate civilization and opulent Christianity For this very reason they deserve no clemency for this reason it is doubly dangerous to pardon such men, on the plea that they suffer so keenly under the severities of prison life The answer to this plea is that they cannot plead the unfavorable influences of birth, want of parental care, scholastic instruction and religious training they cannot plead the degrading drift and brutalizing tendencies of pauperism, which are the lot of children who are the rotten vegetable growth of dark cellars and the stunted shrubbery of the slums and because they cannot make this plea their sin is greater, and therefore their punishment should be more severe

The Century's biography of Lincoln contains an extract from a letter written by him December 17, 1840 soon after the election of President Harrison to John T Stuart, member of congress from the Springfield, Ill, district Mr Stuart and Mr Lincoln were entitled according to party usage to the "patronage of the district." Mr Lincoln, however, privately advised Mr. Stuart that he was not in favor of removing postmasters for mere political differences He said

This affair of appointments to office is very annoying more so to you than to me doubtless I am, as you know opposed to removals to make places for our friends Bearing this in mind I express my preferences in a few cases as follows etc

It is evident that Lincoln was a civil service reformer his views were those expressed by Jefferson and enforced by John Quincy Adams When he became president Lincoln did not act upon the principles of the letter for the very good reason that under the tremendous stress of a gigantic war there was no time or opportunity to consider [illegible] one of civil service reform It forms were as silent as laws are amid the clash of arms

Ring republican newspapers in all parts of the state which have been attacking so venomously the Hon Joseph Simon senator from Multnomah and chairman of the republican state central committee which have been denouncing him so wickedly as a traitor and demanding that he be deposed and cast out from all positions of honor and trust, will doubtless now be highly gratified to see that our worthy senator and chairman is still in his place as manager and they will begin to restrain their abuse and give him the meed of praise he deserves Now it is hoped they will see it as they never saw it before, that neither the state nor the party can do without him

A Brooklyn council of Ministers recently acquitted the Rev Benjamin Staunton of adultery, but the court promptly granted his wife a divorce on the same evidence, and the highest judicial authority in Rhode Island has convicted pastor Goodell of adultery, while a council of ministers, with all the evidence before them declared their faith in his purity unshaken The explanation is plain The secular courts follow common sense in their conduct, while church councils often try a brother in the high court of sensational sentimentalism

It misleads nobody, it is too transparent to be even amusing, to see Siglin posing in the senate as a democrat, while he aids the looting republican ring Siglin is known everywhere as one of the assistants upon the Mitchell Simon republican machine, which is "running things for all there is in them," and his loud professions of democracy are intended merely as a cloak or disguise to his conduct. But they disguise nothing Verily, Siglin has his reward, and his antics deceive nobody

The last message of the retiring governor and the inaugural message of the coming one will be read to day at the capitol at half-past 10 The two will fill about fifteen columns of THE OREGONIAN, and it will take three or four hours to read them

In San Francisco in 1885 there were fifteen murders, and thirty-one last year, and yet Gov Stoneman, the last week of his term, pardoned six murderers, three burglars, a highway robber and a forger

AN OPEN LETTER

To the President of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company

WALLA WALLA Jan 10 1887

Hon Elijah Smith President—Sir Your freight rate on wheat from here to Portland a distance of 245 miles is $6 a ton 18 cents a bushel a little less than [illegible] cents a ton or 000735 a bushel per mile Can your road afford to carry it for less ?

By the 1886 report of Joseph Nimmo Jr chief of the bureau of statistics treasury department it will be seen that the average freight charge of the leading railroads of the United States for 1885 the last year therein given is 1 cent and [illegible] a mill a ton per mile or considerable less than one half the charge made by your road on wheat. In Bradstreet's of April 1886 the average charge per ton per mile of all the railroads of the United States in 1885 is given at a fraction under 1¼ cents or about one half your charge on wheat Each ton was moved an average distance of over 110 miles Yours was moved more than twice that In these comparisons you should remember that the rates given as the charges of other roads represent an average on all classes of their freight while the rate given for your road is the wheat rate a low class rate on all roads a rate always much below the average freight rate For example your charge for first class freight is $34 a ton as against $6 on wheat

Look at the question Can your road afford to carry wheat for less than it now charges? In this light The last reduction of wheat rates made by the O R & N Co was in 1884 a reduction of $1 a ton from the $7 rate in and from 1882. By a table, compiled in 1885 of the wheat rates on Eastern roads up to and including 1884 I gather the following Four years back from 1884 namely in 1880, the average freight charge per bushel of wheat from Chicago to New York by rail was 19 cents and [illegible] mills or 00216 per mile about one fourth your charge four years ago But these Eastern roads didn't stop reductions even at that low rate From 00216 a bushel per mile in 1880 the Eastern roads dropped to 0001425 a bushel per mile in 1884 Think of this! These comparisons, Mr President, have weight with us. When we remember that that which is highest usually falls farthest but that your road dropped only one seventh during a period of time in which other roads already charging four times less than the O R & N Co, fell in their tariff in the neighborhood of one half the fact becomes the more apparent to us that your road can afford to carry our wheat for less than it now charges You have a road whose business has been increasing yearly and whose rate of charges on wheat has decreased but $1 a ton in five years, while your rate now on wheat is twice as much as the average rate on all classes of freight charged by the other roads of the United States and is more than five times as high as the rate on railroads running between Chicago and New York Your rate has remained almost stationary while other roads having already a rate two-thirds less than that of your road, have been reducing their rate nearly one-half All this though you are carrying our wheat over a grade which is for the entire length of the road down hill Seeing and comprehending, we of this region have said to ourselves and now say to you with all due respect The Oregon Railway & Navigation company should charge us a less freight rate It can afford to

As the transportation of wheat constitutes about one half of the entire traffic of your road it behooves you to consider whether it is for the well being of your road to reduce its wheat rate We are afraid your company has forgotten that the prosperity of the people and the railroad is so linked that if the people suffer, soon will the road Permit me to impress this principle upon you The New York railroad commissioners in their report for 1884 say "That railroad which regards its transportation opportunities as prey is digging the grave of its prosperity and is prohibiting its own growth " * * * "It is the modern policy of railroads to give low rates, the consequent growth more than makes up this loss " In Georgia where the charges of the railroads were reduced by a commission we find by the state report of 188[illegible]

All predictions that the action of the railroad commission of Georgia would paralyze the railroad interests of the country have failed An experience for three years has shown large increased revenues to the stockholders, higher prices for railroad shares, increased tendency to invest capital in our state and the railroad authorities and the people on better terms with each other than ever before during a similar period in our history " In 1884 this commission said. The healthy financial condition of the railroads does not indicate that they have been injured by the reduction " Extracts of like character might be cited from all directions. I will cease these examples with the citation of but one more The president of your road in the second annual report said The sacrifice by a reduction of rates the company made in the interest of the producing community has already brought its legitimate reward A much larger acreage was planted throughout the wheat region tributary to our lines

Two more points Mr President permit me briefly to call your attention to (1) The Washington territory legislature of 1885-6 voted upon a bill regulating railroad freights and fares In the council the vote was [illegible] to 5 against regulation In the house [illegible] to [illegible] in favor of regulation Had this bill passed, the wheat traffic over your road would have been diverted at Wallula to the North Pacific railroad as by shipping east over that line the wheat producer receives about 8 cents a bushel more than he receives by shipping to Portland over your road at $6 a ton The feeling in favor of regulation of freights by law has I believe increased since the last session of our legislature If the passage of such a bill by our next legislature appears probable to you it might be deemed advantageous to your road to the extent that you may regard it advantageous to fix your own rates on all freight to endeavor to prevent such legislation by taking away the cause for it in voluntarily reducing your wheat freight rate (2) The day is near at hand when this community will have competing railroad outlets for the shipment of its freight When that time comes will it be worth anything to your road to have the good will of this people Would it not be of some value to your road to enter upon the era of competition with this people kindly disposed to the O R & N rather than unkindly disposed to it? I read that it is believed in New York that as soon as the (N P) line across the mountains is finished the river road (O R & N) will hardly be worth operating at first for some years to come This appears somewhat overdrawn but if the O R & N Co goes into the fight with no more of the good will of this people than it now possesses it is likely that the New York prediction will be found not to be wide of the mark If you believe that our good or ill will is a factor affecting the outcome of that prediction would it be safe to postpone the time for making an effort to obtain our friendship by the only means in your power—the reduction of your freight rates on our wheat Very respectfully

W H REED

BULL RUN WATER

PORTLAND Jan 11

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

In this morning's OREGONIAN I noticed that the water committee have very wisely concluded to ask the legislature to grant authority to issue $[illegible]00,000 more of bonds to bring in Bull Run water I do not see how the city could honorably do otherwise The Portland Water company sold out under stress with the positive understanding that Bull Run was to be brought in With Bull Run water their stock was greatly depreciated and this was what made them take a low figure for their [illegible] Without Bull Run water their plant would return a good interest on twice what they sold it for Therefore they have been wronged If the committee drop the project of bringing in Bull Run and the only honorable thing for the committee to do it seems to me is to return the property of the Portland Water company to its owners Portland can't afford to set the example of jockeying [illegible] the world Her good name is too valuable to be for that [illegible] drink impure water forever than [illegible] a wrong thing. However, if the intentions of the committee may be [illegible] they can't get rid of the appearance of [illegible] methods in this transaction if they desist from the original plan

Mr Reed claims that the Willamette water is pure and good For nine months in the year he is right The sewage from the [illegible] along the banks above Portland amounts to nothing, towards corrupting the water now and will not for years to come For three months this last fall he did bleed and [illegible] past Portland daily so that the [illegible] to the anchors Every one who observed the river knows this to be true [illegible] the [illegible] from the city of Portland for months [illegible] up and down with the tide [illegible] pumping works daily so that for three months in the year as it [illegible] the pumping works might just as well be located at Swan Island below the town as where they are The sewage that is emptied along the city front is carried along the shore to the pumps and is pumped into our kitchens etc and we drink it It is to be hoped that the committee will not falter in this matter and thereby lose a golden opportunity to furnish Portland with an abundant supply of the purest and best water in the world Give us Bull Run even at present prices CONSUMER

SYMPTOMS OF CONSUMPTION

PORT ORAM Morris Co N J March [illegible] 1884

My business is that of sharpening mine drills and I am much exposed to smoke and gas About three years ago I began to have a bad cough with considerable indigestion and pains in my chest My physician told me I had symptoms of consumption By the advice of my father an old friend of BRANDRETH'S PILLS I commenced using that valuable remedy By the time I had got through the second box I began to pass a very disagreeable humor or pus I began to improve very rapidly after this and grew stronger and better every day My cough is now well I sleep well at night and have no more indigestion

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

CARP IN MARKET.—Fish having been very scarce of late in this market, Mr W. S Failing who has a carp pond on his place near Mount Tabor, determined to send some of these fish to town He accordingly secured a small hunting boat and a big scoop net and his boy paddled around the pond which contains about half an acre, and in a short time scooped in 150 fine carp, from nine inches to a foot in length Mr Failing caught and cooked some of his carp last summer, when the pond was low and found them not very nice But now that the pond has been filled with fresh rain water the fish he says are as well flavored as trout. He brought them over to Mullarkey, "all alive, alive O," and they were kept alive in a box of water on the sidewalk till late. Even after they were sold and "caught and killed and dressed" they still continued to live on, and while headless, tailless and bowelless, gaily flapped around the marble slab. Carp by the carload have been sent here from the East, and they have been planted in hundreds of ponds all over the country, but no one seems to be gathering in any harvest from their planting. The lot above mentioned is the largest received here and will give many a chance to make their first trial of carp as a food fish It may be remarked right here that they will never take the place of salmon or trout.

A SCARE AT A BALL.—At a masquerade party recently given at Vancouver barracks by Col Reynolds the festivities were rudely broken into by an alarm of fire which had it not been for the presence of mind of the ladies might have resulted disastrously As it was it was only a good scare and the perforce cessation of dancing was the effect. The hall at the post used for parties theatricals etc was decorated some months ago with festoons of cedar which had been allowed to remain in place On the night in question the room was lighted by a number of Japanese lanterns pendant from the festoons of cedar which as may be imagined were very dry The tables for supper had just been brought in when one of the lanterns caught fire and in a moment the whole ceiling seemed one blaze The ladies at once huddled together and thus left the officers free to cope with the flames They pulled the long festoons to the floor but in doing so dislodged a kerosene lamp and for a few moments things looked very dubious As soon as water was procured the fire was brought under control and in half an hour the party having adjourned to the club rooms below the dancing hall all was merry at supper a trifle cold but with sharpened appetites very palatable After the trouble was over two ladies fainted away

BURGLAR BALKED BY A DOG —About 9 30 Monday night an attempt to rob the residence of Mr Baughman who lives at the corner of First and Woods streets South Portland was frustrated by his Newfoundland dog The burglar entered the front gate passed through another gate leading to the rear yard and walked toward the summer kitchen There were two steps to descend and as Mr Burglar went down he stepped upon the dog, who was sleeping The next instant the burglar lay prostrate and the dog had him by the breast Mrs. Baughman who was alone in the house, hearing the noise, ran out. The thief begged piteously to be rescued but Mrs. Baughman was not strong enough to pull off the dog he being a very large animal, weighing over 100 pounds, and very savage when necessity requires The lady ran to a neighbor for assistance, and when she returned the burglar had made his escape, leaving a piece of his coat and several blood stains as souvenirs of his visit. Mrs Baughman states that she would be able to recognize the man if she ever saw him again Unfortunately the dog was chained else he would probably have killed the man or least wounded him so badly that he could not have escaped

BOOK AGENT FIRED —A great deal has been written about book agents and much labor has been expended in devising some method of mitigating the sufferings they cause to humanity They however generally overcome all efforts in this direction and gaily pursue the even tenor of their ways One however, who patronized Freiman's restaurant came to grief a day or two since. He amused himself while his meal was cooking in trying to sell his books to the waiters thereby interrupting them in their business of serving other customers, who grew hot as their dinners grew cold and who raved while the waiters looked at the pretty pictures. Freiman soon put a stop to this business but the next day the book man came in and tried it on again Jim Hervey was on deck and he ordered the man to put up his books or he would be put out The fellow said he did not think Jim was man enough to do that little job He was convinced to the contrary in such a short space of time that he did not realize just how he did get out of the place and probably doesn't know yet

THE LATE HOMER LOWE.—George Lowe father of Homer Lowe who was killed by the cars in this city on the 31st December now here says that the statement that he refused to pay for the message to Seattle that announced his son's death was untrue Mr Lowe did not hear of the death of his son till four days after his death He had but recently gone to Seattle was little known there and could not be found The undertaker here telegraphed to an undertaker at Seattle and the latter found Mr Lowe and first notified him of the sad occurrence Since four days had then elapsed and the remains could not be preserved longer in their mangled condition Mr Lowe told the undertaker at Seattle to telegraph to the undertaker here to bury them which was done. All the bills have been fully paid Mr Lowe who is well advanced in years, is a man of honorable character and tender feeling, and is deeply afflicted by the loss of his son for whom he has ever cared with the interest of a father

U S CIRCUIT COURT —Judge Deady will announce a decision in this court this morning in the case of the Oakland Home Insurance company vs Elizabeth Stapleton and James Gleason on the motion for an injunction in the case of interpleader The insurance company tried to get out of paying Mrs Stapleton her insurance on the Couch hotel on the plea that arson had been committed James Gleason defended the case and secured a verdict for his client. And then some whisky men came in as interpleaders and wish to gobble up the coin Gleason had fought and "plead for leaving him to take soup for his labor and the industry and talent he had exercised The decision this morning will settle the question as to whether the laborer in this instance, is worthy of his hire or not and all who saw the gallant struggle Gleason made for his client and the other which he made before the court a few days since in defense of his rights will hope that his efforts may be crowned with success

CAUGHT A RUNAWAY —Yesterday afternoon a handsome dapple-gray horse attached to a covered buggy came down Morrison street at racing speed a lad on another horse keeping abreast of the runaway The pace was terrific as the outfit passed Fourth and it looked as if the boy was racing beside the runaway horse to encourage it to greater speed Between Fourth and Third streets the boy drew a little ahead, and just after crossing Third he closed up and seized the runaway by the bridle and soon checked him in his wild career It was very neatly and skillfully done showing that the boy was a good horseman He turned the horse and buggy around and started back up Morrison with them at a swinging trot The general verdict was that the boy had driven cattle and that he was no slouch as a rider

PUSILLANIMOUSLY DRUNK —John Spencer charged with selling whisky to Indians was arraigned in the United States district court yesterday He admitted his guilt but claimed in extenuation that he was under the influence of liquor when he committed the misdemeanor He said he was drunk in fact pusillanimously drunk The court sentenced him to pay a fine of $10 He seemed perfectly willing and satisfied to pay that amount There was only one obstacle to his doing so, which was the fact that he had no money He was informed that he had better try a month in the county jail which would give him time to get sober and at the end of which time he could swear himself out under the pauper convict act That sounds like a nice act for a man to take advantage of

DEATH OF A STRANGER —Yesterday morning John Lewis a middle aged man died at Good Samaritan hospital of heart disease He arrived here five days ago from Seatco W T where he had been working in Brown's sawmill and brought with him his three children a boy aged 11 and two girls aged 9 and 7 respectively His wife died a few months ago and he came to Portland in the hope that Providence might provide a home for his offspring and a place for him to die in peace The case was immediately brought to the attention of the Ladies Relief society and the children were placed in The Home This lifted a heavy burden from the father's mind and his wish to die in peace seemed granted

ASSAULTED BY A SHEEP —Capt. B J Hennessy of Mount Tabor was going around town yesterday with two black eyes and a strip of adhesive plaster across his nose His friends did not like to question him too closely as to the why and the wherefore of his battered appearance but naturally supposed that he had called a man a liar or something of that sort A reporter however inquired into the matter and found that Capt Hennessy had been shipping sheep by railroad and that one of the animals while going aboard had changed his mind and leaped from the car door, his forehead striking squarely on the captain's nasal organ to the serious injury thereof The sheep was not hurt at all

TO THE PENITENTIARY —Sheriff Cornelius of Washington county arrived in this city yesterday en route to Salem He had in custody Isaac Hiatt under life sentence in the penitentiary On the 24th of July Hiatt shot and killed a man named J O Pierce thus fatally terminating a quarrel over the boundary fence between their adjoining properties He was tried and convicted of murder in the second degree on December 15 Hiatt is a tall well preserved man of about 50 years of age and says he committed the act for which he will be sorry the balance of his days, in a moment of excitement and anger

PRODUCE EXCHANGE —The Portland Produce Exchange at the last meeting elected the following directors W S Gibson J R Cameron James Young, E D McKee Geo Pope Wm Dunbar and T B Wilcox They will choose officers this week No steps have yet been taken toward putting the exchange into practical shape and the election was simply to keep the organization alive until such time as the trade of Portland demands an exchange Probably that will be before the year is out

ACCEPTED A SITUATION.—Miss Belle Crocker a student of the shorthand and type-writing school, has taken a position as stenographer for W C Noon & Co where she is doing good work. There is no profession that offers as many inducements to young ladies as shorthand and type writing The work is pleasant and profitable and the profession is not overcrowded

GERMAN AID SOCIETY —At a regular meeting of the German Aid society held last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year John Wagner, president, C. Caesar, vice-president O v Wintzingerode, secretary, Frank Dekum, treasurer, C Meussdorffer, F. Eberle and W. Hoelbing, trustees.

TO MOVE TO TACOMA —Says a Tacoma exchange "The Northern Pacific Land company is about to erect a splendid big structure on the edge of the cliff north of the Halstead house facing Pacific avenue for the offices of the land and railroad company The offices in Portland connected with the Northern Pacific Railroad and Land company with the exception of that of General Western Passenger Agent Charlton will be moved to this city on the 1st of April As the Northern Pacific gets more freight in one day for Portland than in one month for Tacoma probably they will let the general freight office stay here too

WISE AND SUGGESTIVE.

A Word on an Important Phase of our Educational System

CORVALLIS Jan 10 188

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Several cases have come under my notice lately of children untrained and unschooled and who in a few years time will certainly go to swell our criminal classes

When I came to a country of free education it took me some time to learn and to realize that this education was free to be rejected as well as made use of It seems but reasonable and right that a state providing education should take upon itself the privilege of requiring its children to avail themselves of it. It was an equal source of amazement to me to hear parents say "We send our children to school when they feel like it. This of course, accounts for the fact of the many thousands of people in this state who can neither read nor write—too many to belong to the emigrant class from certain parts of Europe

In many cases these children under no coercion from their parents become ashamed of their ignorance as they grow up, and then they feel like going to school" By this time their parents don't feel like it and so they work hard during the summer to pay their own school expenses These same adults are those seated on the primary benches with our children in school and college, much to the detriment of the children These same adults are of course all eagerness to learn, with greater power for perseverance than the volatile little child, who therefore stands a worse chance among fifty or sixty scholars for a teacher's care and attention

Another reason why education should be obligatory is that certain children of weak intellect or of vicious habits (and therefore unfit for the public school routine) should not therefore be allowed to lapse into something worse than barbarism But these poor souls having been denied the right to be well born" should yet be granted the right to be cared for and trained by the state wherever necessary

Let us hope that another legislature will not come and go without making due provision for an industrial training school in this state

Oregon is fast filling up with men and women with the experience of older states in both head and heart Why should Oregon be one whit behind any state in this Union or any country in the civilized Christian world in caring and providing for her children If it is true as a great philosopher says All the vagabondage of the world begins in neglected childhood," it should be the prime duty of every state to provide against this neglect If building the school house and paying the teachers is not sufficient where people are callous and indifferent the state should step in and do the parent's duty, compelling the child to come in Better afford a few more mills to the school tax than be called upon for the dollars to keep the penitentiary full—"Penny wise and pound foolish" is an old true proverb I conclude with a wise word of the Rev T L. Eliot's "Protection is a higher word than prevention as prevention is higher than punishment, or even, I would add, than reformation " L A NASH

OREGON CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY.

Following is the twentieth annual report of the secretary of the Oregon Children's Aid society, at Salem for the year ending December 31 1886.

In presenting the twentieth annual report of the Oregon Children's Aid society we acknowledge with gratitude to our Heavenly Father the blessings and prosperity that have rewarded our labors during the past year

The prospects of the society as a permanent institution grow brighter year by year as its humane object becomes more widely known and its increasing usefulness in caring for the friendless and orphan children of the state gives encouraging evidence of its favorable recognition by the people

From Baker Union Lane Polk, Columbia Clackamas Marion and other counties these children come and none are turned away who need the fostering care and charity of the society

Not one year nor twenty will show great results but month after month the work surely progresses, and we may reflect with gratitude to God that many young people are now started in a way to lead useful and virtuous lives who without the opportunities here afforded would in all probability have grown up worthless, ignorant and vicious

For the past eighteen months the home and children have been under the management of a capable and efficient matron Mrs M C Smith a lady of experience and ability, who faithfully fulfills the duties of her responsible position

There has been but little serious sickness during this time and but one death that of a delicate infant brought from the insane asylum At present sixteen children are to be provided and cared for, eight of whom attend school in the city and this has been about the monthly average during the past year Of the children who in this time have been benefited by this charity, some have been but temporarily assisted others have found permanent homes with responsible parties, it being our policy to find suitable homes as soon as possible where such wards will be properly raised and educated The board endeavors to maintain a watch over those so placed and unless properly cared for in all respects the child or children are promptly removed.

It is now twenty years since the home building was first erected at a cost of $3000 being the result of benevolent contributions and labor Since then other necessary buildings walks fences etc have been added as we have been able Now we have a comfortable cosy home grounds in fruit and shade trees everything in good repair and thrifty condition

In 18 the legislature granted aid to the amount of $1500 yearly and each succeeding legislative body has continued this indispensable assistance realizing the benefit conferred by and the necessity for such a charity No salaries are paid to officers and managers all serve freely and willingly, finding their reward in the good resulting from their efforts

All receipts go directly to benefit the home and are expended with judicious economy and scrupulous honesty

The treasurer's report will show our financial standing and it will only remain for me to state that household expenses and matron's salary for the year amount to $1370 improvements repairs and sundries $32 70 total $1233 0 About seventy letters and postal cards of inquiry and business have been received and answered by the secretary and a number of others by the board To Dr Carpenter former superintendent of the insane asylum and his assistants Doctors Givens & Cox this society is much indebted for favors shown and medical care gratuitously rendered the inmates of the home

We are indebted also to the Statesman and Town Talk for many courtesies and the full use of their columns also to those of our citizens of town and country who at different times have made generous donations to the Home also at Thanksgiving and Christmas times thus enabling these waifs and unfortunate ones to realize in a practical way the meaning of friends and holidays

Within a few weeks we as a society have been called to mourn the death of our friend and colaborer Mrs. T McF Patton Since the first inception of this institution she was an earnest faithful worker giving substantial aid time and never failing sympathy to its objects and aims We feel our loss deeply and mourn sincerely a gentle, loving friend.

The Home is open to the public every day in the week except Saturday afternoon and Sunday All visitors made welcome

Letters of application or inquiry addressed to the secretary will be cheerfully answered Respectfully submitted B G CHASE

NORMAL SCHOOLS AGAIN

OREGON CITY Jan 11

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

One of your correspondents in yesterday's paper in opposing the establishment of a normal school in this state remarks that teachers are born not bred This is true But the same may be said of generals Yet we maintain a military school at West Point and the late war demonstrated that the best officers on both sides had been trained in that school And experience also demonstrates that the best teachers as a rule come from schools were the best methods of teaching are taught No state having experience with good normal schools can be persuaded to abolish them Let us have a good normal school, only taking care that church and state are totally severed and that denominational and sectarian schools are not sustained by the state under the guise of agricultural college and normal schools W CAREY JOHNSON

Street Fenced Up—Installation Knights of Pythias —General Notes

Information has been received to the effect that out in Cole's addition Thomas Fallon has been fencing up the streets for the purpose of making an inclosure in which to keep cows To fence up the streets is a violation of an ordinance, and to create a nuisance within the city limits is a still more flagrant violation and cannot be tolerated The street commissioner has notified Fallon that the nuisance must be abated and that unless it is removed at once complaint will be made

THE SALMON FAMILY

PORTLAND Jan 11 188

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Permit me while the subject of the protection of salmon is being discussed to give as far as a newspaper article will allow some of the results of a series of investigations made during a part of each year since the fall of 1877 of the spawning hatching development and death of the twelve different kinds of salmon in the Columbia river and its tributaries above the Cascades

Naming them in the order in which they appear at the Cascades the first is the Chinook, salmo quinnat, the only salmon protected by the present laws and commercially the most important fish of the salmon family It has a large pointed head, grayish body covered with irregular dark specks, and a forked tail and weighs on the average about twenty seven pounds

The spawning grounds of the Chinook are the Snake river as far as the Shoshone Falls and its tributaries, the Snake just above and below Bruno rapids being their favorite place They gather in the deep holes below rapid places in a stream and go on the gravel bar of the rapid place only in the night for the first few days for the purpose of digging holes for their nests which they do with their tails and ventral fins always throwing the gravel down stream causing a little mound to keep the eggs from being carried away by the current After the first few days they all go to the bar in pairs and remain day and night unless frightened away by an enemy The female takes her position above the nest and with a wriggling motion moves up stream striking the ground and at the same time extruding a number of eggs The male immediately follows with exactly the same motions and deposits the milt, a portion of which fertilizes each egg, which then sinks into the gravel This process is repeated until the female has deposited from six to seven thousand eggs The parent then carefully covers them apparently knowing that in a few days they will be deprived of their natural protectors for after spawning the Chinook salmon gradually turns to almost a black color then becomes blind then covered with white spots, its flesh turns white its teeth grow long and it gradually grows weaker until unable longer to stem the current it drifts away and soon dies In water of the same temperature as the Snake river the eggs hatch in about seventy days those spawned the middle of August being hatched by the last week of October or first of November By the last of the following January the little samlet has grown to the length of two or three inches and by the last of March when it disappears from the upper Snake it has reached the length of four or five inches and takes bait as voraciously as the trout which it has sometimes been mistaken for on account of some resemblances. The shoals descend the stream drifting close to the shore a little more slowly than the current with heads always up stream, stopping often for days in one place By calculating their rate of movement it is concluded that they pass the Cascades on their way down stream about one year after the parents pass up and are from six to seven inches long, and that they enter the salt water in less than one year after they are spawned not to return to fresh water until they are full grown I having never caught a female Chinook of less than fifteen pounds weight

Immediately following or intermingled with the Chinook comes a run of smaller fish ranking third commercially averaging about five pounds in weight known as the blueback (not classified) but differing widely from all other salmon in its mode of spawning as well as its appearance In the water it is of a dull green color without specks but turns blue after being exposed to the air It takes food in fresh water browsing on the tender grasses and leaves of small shrubs that have been overflowed Its flesh is the reddest, with one exception of all the salmon family While spawning, the male and female swim side by side, wriggling and striking each other and at the same time extruding the spawn and milt which coming in contact, float away in the stream and finally sink This fish never seeks shallow streams or gravelly bars to spawn and returns to the ocean after spawning like the smelt A third species of salmon not well known and not classified of no commercial value makes its appearance with the bluebacks It is of a reddish brown color, marked with black crescent shaped spots has large teeth and a hooked nose and reaches the weight of sixty pounds. The upper Columbia is its spawning ground

The fourth species the weak toothed salmon, salmo paucidens (Rich) appears in large numbers about the last of May This fish has been mistakenly classed by the fishermen of the lower river as a young Chinook salmon or grilse I found in my investigations on the Snake river in the fall of 1877 that this class does not ascend the Snake higher than the Boise river but ascends the Boise, Payette Salmon and Weiser four tributaries on the east side of the Snake while none are found in its western tributaries. This fact of their having an entirely different spawning ground together with their peculiar teeth led me to believe they are a distinct species of salmon. Their average weight is about twelve pounds and they rank fourth commercially Like all salmon except the blueback, they die after spawning

At the close of this last run appears the July steelhead salmo truncatus (Suckley) so called on account of the hardness of its bones. This is not generally used for canning on account of its light-colored flesh and hard bones, but is fair either fresh or salted. It differs from all other species in having a short head a long slender body, which tapers less than other species toward the square tail, and entrails covered with fat The principal spawning grounds are the Snake and its tributaries, and the Yakima. In a visit to the upper Columbia and Okanagan this fall, where the Indians were catching many fish, I saw no steelheads which indicates that they do not ascend the Columbia above the Yakima. I have never known them to take food before spawning after leaving salt water This fish is classed by some in the trout family

The sixth species, Gairdner's salmon, salmo Gairdneri (Rich), called the pumpkin seed from its shape, appears in great numbers about the middle of July It averages about twenty four pounds in weight and ranks second as a commercial fish It differs from the Chinook in having a short wide, flat body with larger scales Before there was any fishing at the mouth of the Columbia this fish came in a distinct run but now, owing to the large nets constantly at work on the bar many Chinook salmon are frightened back and instead of coming at the proper time come with this later run and being forced to spawn before reaching proper spawning grounds their spawn is extruded into the river and lost. The principal spawning grounds of the pumpkin seed are the Yakima and the upper Columbia and their tributaries and the Clearwater, the lowest important tributary of the Snake The Indians of that part of the country declared that there was a larger run of this fish than usual this season While traveling in a canoe in the fall of 71 on the Yakima and in a skiff in the fall of 74 5 and 76, on the Clearwater and Snake, I found this fish numerous in the first two streams, but none in the Snake above the mouth of the Clearwater

The seventh class comprises a small fish that is commonly though mistakenly called a young Chinook or smolt To my knowledge it has never been classified by any scientist For the following reasons I believe it is not a Chinook First it does not grow larger than two and a half pounds, second, all fish of this class are males with the milt fully developed third, on the spawning ground with the pumpkin seed it eats their eggs which no other males ever do fifth it dies like them which indicates that it is not a young fish I believe it to be a hybrid salmon—a cross between some other classes of the salmon family of which the issue are males

Following and with this run of little fish comes the eighth species, known as the white salmon salmo lauppitch (Rich) The run is at its hight about the last of July, diminishing until the last of August when all have passed up the river Its spawning grounds are the Columbia and its tributaries as far as the mouth of the Snake It averages about fourteen pounds in weight, but is worthless on account of its flesh, which is white having a strong unpleasant taste It will rise to a fly occasionally but readily bites at salmon roe

At the close of July come the silversides salmo argyreus, (Grd) They average about fifteen pounds in weight the flesh is oily of a pinkish color, and of good flavor, making a good second grade canned fish The fish takes the fly at the foot of falls or rapids quite freely giving some fine sport to the angler It spawns in the Columbia and all its tributaries except the Snake

The dog salmon salmo canis (Suckley), sometimes called hook billed, is easily distinguished by its large teeth, dog shaped mouth and sharp hooked nose Its flesh is red but has an offensive odor and is used for feed only by the Indians Its principal place of spawning is the Dog or Mount Hood rivers

The humpback salmo proteus (Pallas) needs no description beyond its name It is worthless, and not found in great numbers in the Columbia.

The salmon of the twelfth species are not well known as but few are caught in the river The flesh is the reddest of all the salmon family, but of poor flavor and of no commercial value On account of their having no scales or at least only rudimentary ones, it might be called the leather salmon

The other red or pink fish in the river belong to the trout family

As there are so many kinds of fish, varying in size, it would be unwise to prohibit all methods of catching fish but one and it would certainly be unnecessary, because there are other better ways of protection which if enforced by law, would be sufficiently effective The present law would be ample if strictly observed, but, not being enforced, is unsatisfactory A better law would be to prohibit all methods of fishing during two consecutive days of each week during the whole year thus allowing more fish to reach the spawning grounds, and at the same time keeping the market supplied with fresh salmon throughout the year. Other ways would be to limit the openings between the slats of traps, and the meshes in all the pound nets seine wheels and dip nets to three inches to prohibit fishing on the bar to give a bounty for the scalps of seals sea lions and fish ducks, and to establish a hatchery which might be supported by levying a tax on all persons engaged in fishing or canning salmon As it would be difficult to enforce these provisions, it might be a good plan to give the governor power to appoint an inspector of methods of fishing who would report any violations of the law to the prosecuting attorney These provisions if enforced would not only keep up the present supply of salmon but would increase their numbers year by year G W WILLIAMS

Never Too Late to Learn.

But, to tell the plain truth, it is mighty hard to learn some people here. For instance, we have started our Great Bean Sale, and have advertised it heavy, but there is not an hour in the day that some one don't come in the store and ask what those beans are for, when right in the window with the jar of beans explaining all is a card with full explanations. But it is

Never Too Late to Learn

And in fact we don't believe some people ever will learn; but if some

Quack Doctors

Were to come into town with their wonderful remedies, how quick everybody would know how to spend a dollar that would do them more harm than good.

We are Not Quacks,

But are simply sellers of Clothing, Furnishing Goods, Hats, and are Merchant Tailors, and we strive to live and let live, and work hard to make an Honest Penny.

BUT WE WILL LOSE A GOOD MANY DOLLARS THIS WEEK

On the following lots:

Boy's Overcoat	at Less than Cost
Boys' Rubber Coats	at Less than Cost
Youths Suits	at Less than Cost
Boys' Suits	at Less than Cost
Boys' Pants	at Less than Cost

We say this: We don't care if you have an Overcoat or not, and don't care if you want one or not; but if you feel like looking at 400 Overcoats that we have got left on our hands so late this season, we will interest you this way: Say an Overcoat cost in New York, wholesale, $20, our price now is $18; that will be

A DEAD LOSS

Of $2 on the investment without the freight; and as we want to sell these 400 Overcoats, and are bound to sell them, we are willing to lose on the whole lot

$1,000.00!

Sooner than carry them over. We know that you think that we are

BIG LIARS!

But we can't help it, if you do think it. We are going to sell our Clothing for something. If we can't get cost, we will take less than cost. But the appointive power and placing it in the hands of a committee was a dead lick at the president of the senate. We might as well go back to the good old way and to the democrats.

THE LEGISLATURE.

(Concluded on Fourth page.)

REMARKS BY WAGER.

Wager, of Umatilla, said Siglin alluded to the appointment of committees by the president of the senate as the good old way, but he gave no reason why it was the good way. We were not without precedents in having a committee appointed. The United States senate had adopted such a resolution. He denied, on his part, as assumed by the senator from Coos, that there was any mark of disrespect meant to the president by voting for such a resolution, by himself or any other member, democrat or republican. Five or seven members, consulting together, could do better than the president.

Miller of Josephine said he rose for information. It seemed strange that a gentleman should rise on this floor and say there was any other purpose in the resolution than the general interest of the state. If it was a good resolution for the control of one body, it was a good one for the control of the other. He referred to the resolution of Monday and called attention to the fact that the name of President Carson was not on the resolution. How did it emanate and of whom was it composed? Were the members of all sections of the state consulted? His section of the state had not been. It seemed to him it was an insult to the president. If it was their desire that the republican and democratic members should select this committee, why did not the minority yesterday vote down this resolution and suggest this? He believed that it was nothing but an insult.

SIMON DEEPLY PAINED.

Simon said he regretted that the discussion had assumed the shape that it had. He would prefer that they should consider it more calmly. He did not think the resolution meant disrespect, but it would appear that way, and that impression would go about the state. He thought there would be no harm in adopting Siglin's resolution. In many states it was the practice for the president to appoint standing committees; in other states the lieutenant-governor. He thought the president should appoint the committees. He thought it would be a disgrace to this state that it should go abroad that the senate had not confidence enough in its president to allow him to appoint its committees. He had no feeling in the matter, but thought they should go back to the good old days. The senators should think the matter over.

Weatherford, of Linn, had no feeling in the matter, but he knew the republicans two years ago took the power out of the hands of the presiding officer and gave it to a committee, and he never heard the integrity of President Waldo or President McConnell questioned throughout the state. The committee was appointed so that they could consult together and make good selections. The committees shape the legislation of the senate. Where is the member who would consent to leave the appointment of standing committees to any one senator? The minority should ask representation on certain committees, and also the majority. He was not trying to make any political capital. Weatherford moved that the resolution be amended; that instead of the president appointing, it read "a committee composed of Carson, Cartwright, Hare, Wager and Coleman," who represented every section in the state.

Stanley moved to amend that Siglin, of Coos, and Miller, of Josephine, be placed on the committee.

Weatherford said he would accept the amendment if Lee were placed on the committee.

Lee said he did not wish to act.

Weatherford suggested Looney, then, instead.

The resolution with the amendments added was then put.

Hare then took the floor and referred to Senator Miller's remarks as to the action of yesterday. He said there had been no chance even to debate on the question, which was immediately voted upon. There was no law, nor never was, that gave the president power to appoint standing or other committees, and while he had no feeling in the matter one way or the other, he had intended after the discussion was over, to make a motion to lay on the table, and let members get together and talk over the matter. He believed the democratic members should name their committees and the republicans theirs. He would suggest that the matter go over until 3 o'clock.

Watts, of Yamhill, said everybody said there was no feeling in the matter, but he knew there was. He thought Senator Hare had made a valuable suggestion, and as he wanted to do the best he knew how for the best interests of the state, he would move that the resolution lay over until 3 o'clock. Hare seconded the motion, which carried without a dissenting voice.

HOUSE.

Met at 10. Prayer by Rev. Chambers, of Salem.

Paulson, of Washington county, introduced a memorial to congress stating that the election of United States senators by legislatures "is the cause of much contention and strife, and even corruption," and praying a change in the law, making senators elective like other officers of the state. The memorial was referred to the judiciary committee to be appointed.

Dr. Hill, of Salem, last March and the present bill was submitted for criticism to the National Conference of Charities, at St. Paul, last July. It provides that the governor shall appoint a board of seven persons who are given the necessary authority of inspection. It gives no executive power. Its functions are supervisory only. THE FIRE RECORD.

DYNAMITE FACTORY DESTROYED.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Jan. 11.—A dynamite factory at Plattsburg, N. Y., was destroyed by fire and an explosion at 1 o'clock this morning. The shock was felt here, twenty miles distant. Doors and windows were rattled as if by a heavy shock of earthquake, and many hundred people ran into the street. Private dispatches state that fire caught in the engine room, and the workmen left when they were unable to extinguish the flames. No lives were lost. The main factory was destroyed, but the storehouse near by, with a large amount of dynamite in it, escaped.

Those who participated claim that Reagan will receive at least forty votes on the first ballot. His more enthusiastic friends say he will lead on the first ballot, but one of his most judicious followers conceded that Maxey would start with a plurality. The legislature will organize at noon to-day.

During 1886 Puget sound shipped foreign and to Atlantic ports 166 cargoes lumber, valued at $1,492,470. The coal and lumber trade for the year required 662 vessels of 518,576 tons register. Of these 87 were foreign vessels. To coastwise ports 284 cargoes lumber were sent in American vessels, and 212 cargoes coal. The foreign lumber trade for 1886 increased 85 cargoes, valued at $424,740, over 1885. There was a small decrease in the coastwise lumber trade, which was more than made up by an increase in the coal trade.

Grace Brothers, Callao freight circular, dated December 4, contains the following: Nitrate—Rates have fallen off to £1 5s orders U. K., £1 10s continent, for handy iron vessels, and even this is a nominal quotation in view of the fact that the market continues to show a declining tendency. For the United States £1 3s 9d orders is quoted for handy first class wooden vessels, but with very limited inquiry. Wheat—The partial failure of the crop in some sections of Chile will retard shipments. At present there is no demand for tonnage nor quotation for the business. Guano—Shipments continue indefinitely postponed.

A San Francisco report for last week says: The past week has been a quiet one in most lines of merchandise, but there have been some exceptions, notably spices, which show a marked improvement in nearly all descriptions. Sago and tapioca have advanced to 4¾c; mace is now quoted at 48@50c, cloves at 27¾c, nutmegs at 47½@50c, and pepper 16¾c for China, 17½@18c for Singapore and 31@32c for white. Quicksilver improved in London during the week and receivers here now ask $38 50@39 per flask. The latest London quotation is £7 7s 6d per flask. The coffee market continues very strong with an upward tendency. Latest sales of Salvador from first hands are at 14½c per pound, but there are now no sellers at this price. The condition of the New York market, which is now quoted at 15¾@15¾c for fair cargo Rio, imparts a confident feeling to holders of coffee in this market. The movement for local account is small, owing to the condition of trade, but there is a good inquiry from the East for desirable shipping descriptions of Central American coffee. Jobbers continue to quote same as last week, and in some instances these quotations are below the prices of importers. The market is in the hands of sellers, and no concessions are made to effect sales. On December 31 the California refinery issued a new list on refined sugar, showing a reduction of ⅛c per pound on all white grades, and ⅛c on Extra C and Golden C. The American refinery has made no change public, and if any rebate is made from last week's list, it is on a sub rosa basis. Jobbers who handle the latter claim to be selling at the list for cash, while those who handle the California refinery product are selling at ⅛c per pound above the list of that refinery. The Standard refinery granulated is reduced ⅛c, to correspond with the reduction of the California already mentioned. Trade in sugar is very quiet, both for local account and for shipment overland. Meantime competition between the refiners is sharp, without any outward expression on the part of either company. The market is now fairly well supplied with raw sugar, and both refineries are at work. Island rice is a point lower at 4@4½c; mixed China in comparatively small supply and held steadily at $1 35@1 40 per double mat.

WHEAT—Foreign markets again lower, Chicago and New York easier. Our own market cannot be said to show change. For fair sized lots of valley $1 40 is named as entirely possible, although there are few sellers at this. Buyers are not pressing the market as present advises are. Receipts light. Arrivals of Walla Walla indicate recent new business in that section.

FLOUR—Steady at full prices. Demands are good.

OATS—Light movement and market fair. California reports light stocks.

EGGS—Steady at 22½c. Receipts only about equal to demands.

POULTRY—Chickens firm at full prices; other quiet to dull.

SHIPPING NOTES.

Ship Harvey Mills, lost off Cape Flattery, was built in 1876 at Thomaston, Maine, and named for her builder. His son took charge of the ship, and was usually in some trouble with the crew. In 1877 she was partially burned at Port Royal by some of the crew. A few years ago she sunk a vessel off Queenstown and her owners paid a heavy bill of damages. Capt. Mills is now living in San Francisco.

Several changes have recently been made in the captains of the Oregon Improvement company's fleet of steamers. Capt. Holmes of the Umatilla has been transferred to the Willamette, which has been chartered by the Pacific Mail company to ply between Panama and Acapulco. Capt. Blackburn of the Al-Ki takes command of the Umatilla, and Capt. Crawford, formerly chief officer of the Umatilla, takes command of the Al Ki.

Bark Will. W. Case has been chartered for merchandise from San Francisco to Kahului and back with sugar.

Steamship Willamette sailed from San Francisco the 8th inst. for Panama, and not as reported.

A Remarkable Cure of Scrofula.

William S. Baker, of Lewis, Vigo County, Ind., writes as follows: "My son was taken with Scrofula in the hip when only two years old. We tried several physicians, but the boy got no relief from their treatment. Nothing your SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, OR BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP, recommended so highly, I bought some of it of you in the year 1862, and continued taking it till the sores finally healed up. He is now 21 years of age, being [illegible] that [illegible] we want to try again in [illegible] and write to you to get some more."

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

DID HE THROW THE BOMB?

CINCINNATI, Jan. 11.—The conjecture has been made that Prof. B. Schaff, who took morphine in jail yesterday and died, was the bomb thrower at the Chicago Haymarket riot. This is based on the fact that his friends in jail were anarchists, and that two of them say he wrote many of the most incendiary articles in the Chicago anarchists' organ before the riot. It is thought he feared a trial in the police court here would reveal his connection with the riot, and result in his arrest for that crime.

The Blood

Is the source of health; therefore, to keep well, purify the blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is peculiarly designed to act upon the blood, and through that upon all the organs and tissues of the body. It has a specific action, also, upon the secretions and excretions, and assists nature to expel from the system all humors, impure particles, and effete matter through the lungs, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin. It effectually aids weak, impaired, and debilitated organs, invigorates the nervous system, tones the digestive organs, and imparts new life and energy to all the functions of the body. A peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that it strengthens and builds up the system while it eradicates disease.
